[Nov 27, 1906]

Dear ones at home, -

Just think of it, I shall be home day after to-morrow! It hardly seems as if I could wait, but I have so much to do that the time will go before I realize it. I shall get home probably about three o'clock. Now I'll tell you what I'm going to do, and I guess you'll think I'm crazy, but never mind. You know I have to come back here Friday noon to go to Bible & English recitations at 1:30 + 2:25. That means that I get out at 3:10. Then I'm coming home again for the Reunion. Laurence wrote and invited me to go with him, as perhaps you know, and I wanted to go so much that I accepted. Well, I have to come back here Saturday morning for two recitations, have two Lab. periods in the afternoon, and go to the Sophomore Prom. from 4-6: then I have dinner and go to the Prom. again from 7:30-9:30. What do you think will be left of me by Sunday morning? Still, I want to do it all, and I shan't have many lessons for Friday and Saturday.

What are you going to do about Thanksgiving? I think my family are sort of jills not to ever telephone to me or anything, for so I don't know anything about what you're going to do. Are you going to have Aunt Fertie's family down or what?

I have sent my laundry this morning and with it my graduation dress. I'm awfully sorry to ask you to clean it, mother dearest, but I don't think it is fit to wear to the Prom. which is the swellest function of the year. If you can, I wish you'd do it before Thanksgiving and then hang it outdoors a long time to get the smell out. I think I'll wear my princess dress to the Reunion; I've worn it a few times here, and everyone is crazy about it.

Well, I am going to see you all very soon and so I won't write any more, for I have a 20-30 page forensic to write to-day, and it's going to take me practically all day. This is besides my regular work in other things. So good-bye until day after to-morrow.

Lovingly yours,
Ruby.
